THE STATISTICS SHOW OLIVER'S POPULARITY WANING

In the city of Edmonton, Frank Oliver got 2,861 votes, the conservative candidate got 2,841 and the socialist 291, a total of 5,993.

There were, therefore, 271 more votes cast against Frank Oliver than there were for him in the city of Edmonton. In other words, Frank Oliver did not receive a majority of the votes in his home town.

In 1908 Oliver got 2,434 votes out of a total of 4,207 votes cast in the city; or 57 per cent of the total vote.

In 1911 Oliver got 2861 votes out of a total of 5,993 cast in the city, or only 47 per cent. of the total vote cast.

There were 1786 more votes cast in the city of Edmonton in 1911 than there were in the election of 1908, an increase in the voting strength of this city equal to 42 per cent.

Of this increased vote Oliver polled but 23 per cent., while his opponent polled 77 per cent. of it.

IN A POSITION TO DEMAND AN INVESTIGATION

Mr. Oliver announces that he will not resign. Certainly not! Why should he?

In asking the electors of the Edmonton district to return him to Ottawa Mr. Oliver made his greatest plea on the grounds that he wanted to go back in order to demand an investigation of his affairs.

Now he is elected and he has the opportunity to go to Ottawa and demand that they look into his bank account. And he has in Mr. Borden as leader of the government a man who is pledged to make the investigation as thorough as is humanly possible.

Frank Oliver is now in the position in which he said he wanted to be—all ready to get himself examined.

With the public still anxious to hear where the money came from, it would be altogether too bad to see Mr. Oliver resign now.

AN EUROPEAN WAR ALMOST INEVITABLE

From the preparations being made by Turkey and Italy it looks very much as though the continent of Europe, which for years and years has been virtually an armed camp, is about to find itself in the midst of the greatest war that history has ever known.

The scene of the present trouble is Tripoli, but what the fuss is all about is not so very plain at this distance. The cause of the most recent difference, however, really matters little. Both countries have been building warships for two or three generations, each on its own side of the Adriatic, and each has brought its children up to believe the other the natural enemy. The day of conflict was therefore more or less a matter of accident, but the inevitableness of the conflict could never have been in doubt.

But what does matter is that with Turkey and Italy in a conflict the other nations of Europe can scarcely keep out. As it is now, only the intervention of the powers can prevent an immediate appeal to arms, and should this intervention either be withheld or fail, the result would be to help to make the intervenors a party to the quarrel, either on one side or the other.

What the world's map would look like after an European war it is idle to even guess. From this distance only one thing seems to stand out clearly, and that is the certainty that a general appeal to arms would give the socialists and radicals in all nations the opportunity they have awaited for years to overthrow the present forms of government and establish a new democracy.

Possibly it is a very clear conception of this that has led the men who are the governing force in Europe to withhold their hand so long.

JUST PARAGRAPHS

While the Oliver forces were electing officers for their organization they should have arranged for a wholesale consignment of embalming fluid with which to treat their still-born association.

In preparing the cabinet list it is noticeable that R. B. Bennett, whose name is linked with that great corporation, the C. P. R., is omitted because of his inexperience in Dominion affairs, while the names of Robert Rogers, Dick McBride and Frank Cochrane, whose affection for the Canadian Northern has never been in doubt, are to be invited to leave provincial politics and come on to Ottawa.

It is when Borden commences to check over the list of office-hunters that he understands where the majority came from.

DECLARES WAR ON "MURDEROUS PINS"

WOMEN OF BERLIN ARE INSTRUCTED TO CEASE WEARING LONG HAT PINS

(Globe Cable Service.)
Berlin, Sept. 28.—Herr von Jagow, the Berlin police president, who recently declared war on "murderous" hat-pins, has now issued a ban on enormous hats.
Berlin theatre managers have been notified that henceforth women who wear modern, view-obscuring millinery will be guilty of a misdemeanor, for which the managers will be held responsible. A fine of $25 will be inflicted on managers every time a woman is allowed to keep on her hat while in a box.
Herr von Jagow states that he is impelled to issue this decree with a view to the "preservation of public order," inasmuch as the wearing of large hats by occupants of boxes frequently leads to violent altercations with people whose view of the stage is shut off. It has long been obligatory for women sitting in stalls and balconies to remove their hats.

REVOLUTIONISTS MAKING BOMBS

SCARE IN CANTON, CHINA, MAY BE OVERSTATED, BUT WEALTHY PERSONS QUIT CITY

(Globe Cable Service.)
Shanghai, Sept. 28.—Letters from Canton are disquieting accounts of an insidious device of the revolutionaries to distribute seditious pamphlets in the guise of Gospels published by the British and Foreign Bible Society and other missionary societies. One of the pamphlets in the recent attack on the Gospels was observed to throw away a box which was found to contain bombs concealed beneath two Gospels. These books are readily obtainable and thus the revolutionaries easily pose as mission collectors.
The revolutionary scare in Canton is possibly overstated, but the authorities are nervous and the wealthy continue to quit the city. The missions have been requested to temporarily suspend the street sales.

PROSPERITY OF CITIES DEPENDS ON FARMERS

average as we do in the naturally better lands of the Mississippi Valley. That demonstrates the difference between farming and merely mining the soil fertility.

This condition has been greatly hastened by our statements. The gift of an empire of land to railroads to enable them to furnish speedy and cheap transportation for vast quantities of agricultural production stimulated the farmer was often, and in fact generally until about twelve years ago, forced to sell his products at and often under the cost of production. This gave the world cheaper food than it will ever see again, and made possible the wonderful growth of great cities the world over.

The anxiety of the farmer to find a home market instead of having his prices fixed in a foreign market under competition led to the continuance of the system of high tariffs long after the reason for it had ceased to exist, thus wonderfully stimulating the cities which with all our boasted ability we have never been able to govern decently. When this undue stimulus is removed, as it will and must be sooner or later, our manufacturers will have to take the same medicine which sickened the farmers in the 70's, 80's and early 90's.

Inasmuch as there are no more Mississippi Valley to be opened up, we are now nearing the turning of the lane. We must from henceforth learn how to farm. We cannot greatly increase our average; will, in fact, be compelled by the return of normal climatic conditions over our western territory to reduce it. The only thing left to do is to grow more grain per acre, better stock in greater numbers per quarter section, and in this way we can reduce the cost of living.

Our great problem, as I said to this Congress a year ago, is how to produce food for our own people at prices which they can afford to pay. But how? Partly by putting more brains into our farming. There is a great deal of agricultural labor wasted simply because many farmers do not have even an elementary knowledge of the forces with which they have to work. It is hard to convince them that the fertility of the soil is not inexhaustible. Farmers of this class have been soil robbers for generations, and they continue to grow the same crop year after year, trusting to luck. It is hard to get the farmers of this class to understand the philosophy of crop rotation, of the natural movement of water in the soil, or of the requirements of crops; in short, of the requirements of plant and animal life, or to persuade the into active co-operation with each other, or to get them in actual touch and sympathy with the new agriculture. This is an educational process, and there fore slow, even when there is a disposition to acquire the knowledge.

Many farmers have more faith in moon signs than in agricultural colleges and experimental stations; more faith in ordinary peddlers than in college professors and scientists; more faith in religious superstitions than in the best agricultural papers.

For this reason we now grow on an average only about a third of a crop to the hill; whereas the good farmer often grows a much better land originally two pounds per hill of three stalks, and three pounds is possible. We grow fourteen bushels of wheat per acre (this is about two and a half) while on land no better naturally, and often not as good, England grows thirty-two bushels of wheat per acre. The new agriculture has lifted the English and the Danish farmer out of the rut. It will lift us when we begin to use our brains. Before this Congress adjourns we will have some illuminating discourses on this branch of the subject, addresses by men of national reputation who have devoted their lives to some particular phase of the problem of conserving and restoring soil fertility. We would not, even if I could, anticipate what they will say and say so well.

The farmer complains that he cannot employ labor necessary to grow full crops on his land, and therefore that he cannot now engage in intensive farming. There is just ground for his complaint. The factory, the store, the railroad, the trolley line outbid him for the labor, even that which is farm born and farm bred. He cannot use the cheap labor of southern Europe nor the hobo or tramp, nor the ne'er-do-well of the city, because the farm with its improved machinery and its live stock requires skilled labor, and a kind of skill that can be acquired only on the farm. He can use Russians and the Japanese in the beet fields. He can use the emigrant from southern Europe in the vegetable garden in digging ditches or making roads; but he cannot use this kind of labor in farming operations. He dare not employ an unskilled man in milking his cows, in feeding his cattle, nor in the care of his machinery or other improved implements or team.

Therefore the very root and kernel of our modern farm problem is how to retain on the farm all the boys and girls born there, who are to be the farmers or farmers' wives. This can be done only by making farm life worth living. Making money on owning a farm is not all of farm life. We have but one life to live on this earth, and we should get out of it all that is possible. In many sections in the country, with bad roads, poor schools, most churches and no social life, farm life is not worth living. That proof of this is seen in the fact that farm boys and girls flee from the farm, and the farmer himself, as soon as he thinks he is able to live in town.

BERESFORD SCORES NAVY DEPARTMENT

BRITISH ADMIRAL DECLARES BRITAIN IS RESPONSIBLE FOR "INSANE COMPETITION."

(Western Associated Press.)
Victoria, B.C., Sept. 28.—A Canadian club luncheon, Lord Beresford, criticized the policy of the British navy administration in abandoning its traditional role as a naval base in common with our overseas bases. "During a certain period of naval administration," he said, "the British navy has been a mere adjunct to the British empire, and in several instances our countrymen are taking shares in agricultural colleges in order to do so their own thinking and set for them. He is beginning to realize that the teaching has some relation to the life of the farm. It is buying his own automobiles, and paying cash for them. He is beginning to realize that farm life is essentially different from the life of the town. The man who steps high becomes accustomed to walking over clouds and has the far away look of one who studies the clouds, is a different type of man altogether from the man who glides along the pavement and to the man whose weather is a matter of little or no immediate concern. The man who glances over the headlines of his daily paper while he sips his coffee is a different creature from the man who reads and studies the editorial of his weekly paper. This farmer's wife is not a creature of the sea, when her town sisters lessons in club work. The movement to organize farm clubs is spreading. The boys and girls are organizing for games. BUYS CASTLE AS A WEDDING GIFT

PICTURESQUE RUIN AT BRANDIS
WILL BE RESTORED FOR USE OF ROYAL BRIDE

(International News Service)
London, Sept. 29.—As a wedding gift for Princess Zita of Parma, who is to marry Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, his grandnephew, Emperor Francis Joseph has bought the ancient castle at Brandis.

The high pile with its extensive grounds is a picturesque ruin, once
the headquarters of the Bohemian Brethren, and stands in a conspicuous position in the ancient historic Bohemian
town of Brandis, thirteen miles northwest of Prague, on the banks of the Elbe River.

The castle will be restored, architecturally modernized in the interior, and handsomely furnished. It is to be the country residence of the young people.

Princess Zita was a member of a small family party which gathered recently at Schonbrunn Castle, the Emperor's residence on the outskirts of Vienna, to celebrate Archduke Charles' twenty-fourth birthday. The Princess'
gift to her fiancé was a gold cigarette case, suitably inscribed.

Princess Zita is to go with her mother, the widowed Duchess of Parma almost immediately, to Paris to buy her trousseau. Just as Germany's crown princess did five years ago, to the chagrin of the German people.

The resemblance in character between the future German Emperor and Emperor and the future Emperor and Empress Zita is striking. All four have strongly cosmopolitan tastes, are ardent lovers of sport, and prefer the English and French fashions and modes

of those of solemn Teuton.

HEIR TO THE THRONE IS COMPLETELY BROKE

(Globe Cable Service)

Vienna, Sept. 29.—The Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, the Austrian heir presumptive, was placed in monetary difficulties a few days ago for lack of fourpence.

Passing the famous church of St.
Stephen it suddenly occurred to him that he would like to climb to the top of the steeple. On entering a ticket was given to him, but when asked for fourpence, the price of admission, the Archduke discovered that he had come out without money, and gave his name instead.

The attendant allowed the Archduke
to make the ascent, but asked a policeman outside to identify "the young man without fourpence." The next day the Archduke Chamberlain paid
the fourpence and distributed levity tips.

ABOLISH LARGE HATS.

(Globe Cable Service)

Milan, Sept. 29.—The Archbishop of Genoa has addressed a letter to his clergy directing them to exhort the female members of their flock to abstain from wearing the enormous hats
now in vogue. The archbishop points out that these monster hats prevent lumber members of the congregation, who wear a simple mantilla, on their faces, and thus prevent a glimpse of the altar and of the officiating priest.

EXCITING "SCRAP" IN BERLIN STREET

ATTEMPT AT ROBBERY FAILS, BUT SEVERAL OFFICERS AND
"YEGGS" INJURED

(Globe News Service.)

Berlin, Sept. 29.—An exciting battle, in which revolvers were freely used on both sides, has taken place between the police and a dangerous gang of housebreakers in the Mullersstrasse,
one of the principal streets in northern Berlin. The police received secret information that on a certain night an attempt was to be made to rob the offices of the building firm of Messrs.
Kuhn, where several thousand dollars to be paid in wages and rent were known to be in the safes.

The building in which the firm's premises are situated is one of the usual type of the flat houses of Berlin built in the form of a square round
an inner courtyard, the upper floors being used as residential flats, while the ground floor in the rear of the building, and access to their offices is obtained by crossing a courtyard from the outer door opening on the street.

Shortly after midnight Police Commissioner Weiland, with eight men, proceeded to the Muller strasse and looked up observations on the No. 172.
After a wait of nearly three hours
the expected housebreakers put in an appearance. They came along the street singly, and the watching constables saw first a man open the outer door, then a second who was picked up and disappeared into the courtyard, leaving the door unopened behind him. One after another, one man each walked up the street and disappeared through the open door.

After allowing them a few minutes to get to work, the police crept silently into the courtyard. At first nothing was visible in the darkness, but then they saw a flash of light in one of the windows of Messrs. Kuhn's offices on the other side of the street. Almost simultaneously their presence was discovered by one of the robbers keeping watch from the courtyard, and he at once fired from his revolver, his bullet striking a man behind him in the room, who, working by the occasional flash of pocket lamps, was already opened one of the safes, immediately stopped work, and rushing to the door, opened it and fled into the street.
The police of the courtyard.

Police return fire.
The police returned the fire, and for some minutes a regular battle raged. During this exchange the police had slight advantage, for, standing in the dark courtyard, they were visible to the robbers, who, continually expecting their own position by the flash of the pocket flashlights. None of the constables were hit, and finally Weiland sent some of his men into the building while the remainder kept up the fire from the courtyard to distract
the attention of the burglars.

As the police of constables, revolvers
in hand, broke into the room and rushed upon the gang, who were still busy
from the windows into the courtyard,
the latter became panic-stricken, and dashed blindly through the plate glass windows looking on to a fresh yard
in which building material was stored.
Here they were followed by the police.

Two of the robbers were seen to fall to the revolver shots of the police, and were severely wounded. The others, seeing that the odds against them
were most overpowering, threw away their weapons and made a bad desperate attempt to escape, but were also secured. The fifth man, after some search, was discovered hiding in a cupboard, and gave himself up without trouble.

Citizens are alarmed
The noise of the firing and shouting and the crash of breaking glass naturally awakened the occupants of the flats above, and the windows were crowded with excited people in their night clothes waiting. The police, Messrs. Kuhn's offices and freight yard attended presented the picture of a battled camp. Each of the robbers had been holed or less cut while jumping through the glass windows, and the ground was covered with pools of blood in which fragments of broken glass and torn clothing were lying.
One of the police was also severely cut while attempting to prevent the escape of the robbers through the window.

DISCOVER HUMAN HAND IN CANAL

POLICE START LOOKING FOR CRIME
AND FIND HAND BELONGED
TO MUMMY

(Globe Cable Service.)

Milan, Sept. 29.—A great excitement has been occasioned in Venice over the recent discovery of a human hand during dredging operations in the Gondola canal. Experts declared that the hand, which was found hermetically sealed in a wooden box, had belonged to a female child 8 or 10 years old.

The police, convinced that they had to do with a foul crime, were busy trying to trace the numerous multitude when the renowned Orsini family of Signor Mainella, who has resided many years in the Venetian lagoons, arrived home a wealthy Egyptian family, wishing to give him a souvenir of his sojourn in their native land, presented him with what they described as the mummy hand of an Egyptian princess who had lived 6,000 years ago. Signor Mainella preserved the hand, which he had received, in a box when observing that the hand showed signs of decomposition, he immediately threw it into the canal, where it has recently turned up again.

a political campaign fund, he hopes to get two in return.

WAR AND PEACE

By Elbert Hubbard

The history of the race is a history of war and blood. The men who could not stand and quiver were the men who owned the earth, and those who destroyed most were those to whom all honors were paid.

Anyone taking a trip up the Rhine cannot but be seriously impressed with the fact that the chief business of men, until yesterday, was war.

At every bend in the storied river a castle. Each commanding cliff with a fort. Every point of vantage is crowned with a redoubt, or the ruins of the earth both life and property are known weapon of their time once had defence to other men and challenged to the death their brethren.

No man could travel without an armed guard. Every man went laden with the guns instruments of death.

Very gradually things have been changed, until over the forest portion of the earth both life and property are now secure. Men who mind their own business have nothing to fear, and those are safest who carry no weapons. The honors are going to the men who can build—who can create. Willing in proper limits we may express our selves upon any subject of vital interest; we give men the right to their own opinions, and everywhere it is understood that a person has a perfect right to be wrong in his conclusions as well as right.

No more striking proof of this change is found than in the fact that we have recently seen public opinion forcing arbitration upon men who "had nothing to arbitrate."

The men who owned those rock-riddled fortresses and frowning castles on the Rhine once had nothing to arbitrate. They took their positions and held them, but not forever.

It is the people who rule, for backed up by public opinion. When the people feel deeply and think safely, and vibrate together, the "robbers" quickly fall into line and do the good-step.

And now it has come a time when the people object to being used as the tools of the strong. They fight the battles of the strong, and stick to the battles of the strong.

The treaty of arbitration signed between Great Britain and the United States, and France and the United States, on August 8, 1911, forms a epoch in history. It lifts William Howard Taft into the proud position of being one of the great emancipators of mankind. The United States of the World will yet be a reality.

The Moving-Picture Craze

By James W. McGehe

The moving-picture craze has spread like measles through the land, And every town and village has its own peculiar brand.

The cities like the rural scenes, With pumpkins, corn and hay; The country wants the city scenes, The Bowers and Broadway.
The wild views of "Western life" The small boy greets with awe; Are only meant for Eastern States And eastern eyes to see.
The Southern views of "daddy life" The pictures claim to show Would get a cold reception Where the cotton blossoms grow.

The great immortal Washington Can nowadays be seen To cross a local Delaware With two cokes painted green. Napoleon, too, is pictured On the floor of Waterloo; The field looks quite familiar With its peaceful Flushing hue.

The fiery steed Napoleon rides Would not be known today As one that drew a Spring street car For years across Broadway. But moving-picture scenes are set To fit the public's latest fad— The moving-picture craze.

MURDER MYSTERY STILL UNRAVELLED

WEALTHY RESIDENT OF TOURS IS FOUND DEAD—POLICE HAVE NO CLUE

(International News Service)
Paris, Sept. 29.—The police of Tours are still engaged in investigating the strange murder mystery which has occupied them for some time, and which I have already referred to on various occasions. A man of some wealth, M. Goullin, was murdered in his house one night the first of June. He was married to a young woman on whom he had settled an income of 30,000 a year, and in whose favor he had also taken out an insurance policy. After the murder suspicion fell on the cousin, M. Housard, who has since been arrested, and who, it is alleged, had been at one time in love with Miss Goullin.

After an inquiry of two months, suspicion also fell on the young widow, and she has also been arrested on evidence said to have been given by a lady friend, to whom she is reported to have made the following confession concerning M. Housard:

"The day before the murder of M. Goullin, she came to me. She was in a state of great agitation, and eventually said that she could no longer keep the secret that was tormenting her. After making a promise never to disclose the facts she was confiding in, she said to me, 'Paul came to see me about eleven o'clock last night. He threw gravel at my window. I came down to let him in. Hardly had he entered the house when he said, 'Marie Louise, you are such a free woman. When I asked him to swear that he himself had not touched my husband, he replied, 'Too late.' Then he changed the subject and asked me for my ring. I took three glasses, one after the other. Later on he told me that he had left an automobile near the wooden bridge across the Loire, between Trets and Baille. Then he added that he had thrown his gloves into the river, as they were covered with mud. 'If you have your gloves don't lose your head,' said he, and say nothing," he said.

"The body of M. Goullin was found on July 13 in a room of a house on the Quai Paul Bert at Tours. This house had just been bought by M. Goullin, and was being redecorated. Only one or two rooms were habitable, and these were occupied by M. Goullin, when he came to Tours from Baille-sur-Loire, where he had his country home. After Madame Goullin's death, she made the above statement to the examining magistrate, an order was issued for the arrest of Madame Goullin. She was then at a pleasure resort near Nancy, and was arrested in her hotel. She took the matter quietly, and denied that she had ever made such a statement as that repeated by her friend.

ANCIENT AND MODERN VIEWS RESPECTING CHEMICAL ELEMENTS

Discussed in Able Address Delivered in London Recently by Sir Charles Ramsay—Enormous Store of Energy Contained in Radium Clearly Set Out

By W. HAMILTON RHODES.

London, Sept. 27.—Sir William Ramsay, in this recent address before the British association at Portsmouth devoted a considerable portion of his remarks to a discussion of ancient and modern views of the nature of the chemical elements, in the light of recent researches, in which he has had to enlarge a share, on the inert gases of the atmosphere and on radium. Like several distinguished chemists in the past, he is equally attracted by the idea that matter is unitary in its nature, that what we know as elements are in some way compounded of different proportions of some primary material. But whether the consideration be brought forward substantiated, it is true that the atomic weights of many than half the elements are, on the most recent computations, within one-tenth of a unit above or below an integral number.

Energy in Radium

A reference to the enormous store of energy contained in radium and liberated through its disintegration led Sir William Ramsay to the subject of the energy available to the world in general and to Great Britain in particular. Radium itself probably exists in quantities far too small to be of any practical use as a source of energy, but supposing that like the other so-called elements are changing, though very slowly, with evolution of energy, and supposing that some means could be discovered of making the change proceed at a useful rate, then, he pointed out, a new supply of energy would be put at the disposal of mankind which would alter the whole future of the race. But he made it clear that in his opinion we have no warrant whatever for relying on so remote a possibility—"It would be folly to consider seriously a possible supply of energy in a conceivable acceleration of the liberation of energy by atomic change"—and other sources which have been suggested, such as the tides, the heat of the sun, and the internal heat of the earth, are all equally hopeless so far as can be seen at present.

Energy in Coal

In these islands coal is the only considerable source of energy at command, and on England's power to produce it at a relatively cheap price depends her commercial supremacy and her ability to compete with other European nations. Yet, in spite of its paramount importance for them the English have as if the store were inexhaustible. While Belgium raises 3½ tons of coal per head of her population every year and Germany only 2½ tons, England raises six tons, and if she continues to draw on her resources at the same increasing rate during the last forty years, they will be exhausted in less than two centuries. In these circumstances it is plain that England's duty to promote economy in the use of coal by every possible means, and careful consideration is deserved by Sir William Ramsay's suggestion that, following the example of America, England should establish a coal conservation commission, charged with the duty of keeping watch on the diminution of the stores of natural energy and of taking steps to lessen its rate.

The ordinary man, if he can be induced to pay any attention to the question of the exhaustion of coal supplies, and if he does not merely shrug his shoulders and say "that is the way it is," usually consoles himself with the comforting reflection that something will turn up in the end. The history of the scientific spirit. Progress in science, as Sir William Ramsay insists, is not a matter of chance. It is the result of attempting to forecast the future not by vague surmises, but by the orderly marshalling of facts and by deducing from them their logical outcome, and chiefly in endeavoring to control conditions which may be utilized for the betterment of the people.

The findings of the British association are now marked by a spirit of simplicity in comparison with the brilliant debut at Oxford during the summer term of 1910. Those were the days of Georgian dining and drinking, and there was lavish hospitality. In addition to daily dinners, there were special breakfasts in the college gardens, and "free refreshments" at all meetings. Two fat ducks were served, one sent by the Duke of Buckinghamshire, and the other by Archbishop Bourne from Nuneham Park. A skeleton appeared at the feast of these epicurean banquets in the shape of a question: whether women should be allowed to attend their meetings. In the end Mrs. Somerville decided not to attend, "for fear her presence should encourage less capable representatives of her sex." A rather sarcastic allusion of the "Times" commented on this first meeting, and came to the conclusion that such scientific gatherings served no good purpose.

Interests Dickens Admirers

An announcement of great interest to admirers of Dickens is made in the September number of "The Nash Magazine." With an alert eye on the celebration of the novelist's centenary next year, the editor intends to publish a series of articles from various persons who were the intimate associates of the author of "David Copperfield." The first article, copiously illustrated, has now appeared. It is from the pen of Mr. Alfred Tennyson Dickens, the eldest surviving son of the novelist, who, although he has often lectured on his father, has never before written an article about him. As father and son met for the last time in 1865—the year of Mr. A. T. Dickens' emigration—it will be seen that Mr. Dickens' notes come to an end just five years before his father's death.

One of Mr. Dickens' recollections concerns the procession of welcome to Queen Alexandra when she reached this country for her marriage with King Edward in 1863. The route included Fleet street and the Strand. By father, my mother, Miss Georgina Haasler, and myself were the sole occupants of the balcony on the first floor of the office of "All Year Round," at the corners of Wellington and York streets. The traffic was blocked for the procession, and in Wellington Street there was a mass of omnibuses, cabs, carriages and other vehicles.

On the top of one of these buses stood the conductor, a man brimful of spirit and humor, doing the "cheeky man" absolutely to perfection. He beguiled the time and kept the crowd, including my father, in a state of laughter.

From the fact that "Mr. Marigold's Prescriptions" appeared as the Christmas number of "All Year Round" in 1863, Mr. Tennyson Dickens states his firm conviction that the omnibus conductor was really the great idea which became so successful under his father's treatment.

There are many allusions to famous places, incidents, and people of the past, and in mentioning the Tavistock square theatre, Mr. Dickens says: "The scenery was painted by Mr. Clarkson Stanfield, R. A., familiarly known to my father, and his intimate as 'Stanny.' At the sale of the furniture and effects that Gau's Expert Reports Nearly 200 Cases Which Show only 17 Per Cent. Deaths—Latest Experience.

(Special to the Capital) New York, Sept. 29.—No more striking example of medical progress can be cited, perhaps, than two accounts of the treatment of tetanus, or lockjaw, taken from two medical publications. The other account, which is a reprint of a paper published in the medical press, describes the treatment of tetanus by the use of carbolized acid, which has been found to be a most effective remedy. The account of the latest method appears in The Medical Record, and is the discovery of the treatment, and the medicinal agent employed is carbolic acid, used hypodermically.

Lysander John Takes Daysey to Task

By Francis L. Garside

If an unmarried man complains to his girl of the wet weather, she makes an unkind remark, but let him complain after he has married and she will tell him he ought to be thankful he isn't a coot.

Lysander John Appleton, being among those unfortunate ones who are married, gets the worst kind of sympathy, and so far as any relieving terms are concerned, it is the same as if he had not spoken.

He has been complaining frequently of late of the excruciating of young women, and has been complaining of late of the excruciating of young women, and has been complaining of late of the excruciating of young women.

She began with a dab of talcum powder on the tip of her nose ("to face of the shine") and the dab of powder in thick lines and space like a comet's tail, and she began to look like a piece of red and white peppermint candy.

She then added black to her eyebrows and under her eyes, and the next day she was ready to go. She "touched up" her hair. From a modest wave she had grown to a low, like a painted woman, and her maternal instincts were in a state of confusion.

(Western Associated Press) St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 29.—Part of a skeleton of a mammoth animal were found yesterday on a farm in Alburgh township near Rodney by the owner, William Hipon, who was digging a large ditch. He first unearthed a lower jaw, which measured over four feet in length. The teeth were in splendid condition and all four incisors wide and eight inches long. Later appeared two ribs, seven feet long, a shoulder blade and the "atlas" or bone which connects the spine with the skull. The latter bone measured ten times as large as that of the biggest horse.

CITY HALL NOTES

Heads of civic departments have been given until November 20 to prepare their estimates of expenditure for the coming financial year. The original intention of the commissioners was to have all these estimates in readiness by October 20, and this morning Superintendent Knight of the street railway department wrote that he could not bring his estimates down by the ordinary date.

The commissioners will not expend the $500 which they were authorized to do on the construction of a market building on a vacant lot in the view of the pending removal of the market to First street. Some improvements in the laundry accommodation will, however, be undertaken.

Tenders for the advertising in the city street cars will be opened on October 19. Firms may tender for a three year contract, a five year contract, or submit alternative propositions.

SUPREME COURT APPEAL.

Appeal is entered by R. K. Knight against judgment of Mr. Justice Simons dismissing an application for an injunction to restrain the defendants from the sale of a contract for the sale of the north half of lots 60 and 61, river lot 4, for the sum of $2,150. The contract was entered into by A. B. Gushington and A. F. Gushington. Knight repudiated their contract. His lordship dismissed the action with costs against the plaintiffs, and directed that a caveat filed against the property be removed. W. L. Walker, K.C., and J. E. Wallbridge are appearing for Knight; C. C. McLeod, K.C., and A. F. Dwyer are conducting the case in behalf of the defendants Gushington.

RUSSIAN LEAVES WARD CLAD IN A NIGHTGOWN

Has Been Confined in Misericordia Hospital Suffering from Typhoid Fever.

Escaping from the Misericordia hospital yesterday morning between 12 and 1 o'clock, by climbing to the roof of the building and jumping himself down by the fire escape, Mike Teich a Russian farmer from near Lamont, wandered in the city until 7:30 o'clock last night clad in a hospital night gown, his only garment when he left the hospital, an old pair of overalls, a coat and a pair of shoes that he found somewhere during his wanderings.

The man has been admitted to the hospital for some days, suffering from what was thought to be typhoid fever. His escape yesterday was the second he has made within the past two days. On Wednesday he made his way out of the hospital about 3 o'clock in the morning and walked to 1130 Kniesing avenue where he climbed to have friends. His clothing was equally scanty on that occasion. He was captured by the police and returned to the hospital two hours after he had escaped. He remained at large for a longer period yesterday, however. It was not until 7:30 o'clock last night that the police were notified of a strangely acting and seemingly elated fugitive hiding in the bushes at the corner of Pine and Bender streets near the Norwood boulevard. Residents in that vicinity were becoming alarmed at the actions of the man and William Robertson a butcher living at 418 Norwood boulevard who notified the police requested that they come after the man immediately as it was feared he would do mischief if left at large.

The police soon arrived on the scene and the man was returned to the Misericordia hospital in an ambulance. The clothes he had gathered were little better than filthy rags. He said he had found the coat he was wearing in an ash barrel.

It is probable that the man will be examined as to his sanity.
